

TOWN LIGHT PLANT CART

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSION CAN REFUSE THE HITCHING

Debt Capacity of Town Without Vote of People Remains Unascertained.

The regular August Town Council meeting was held on Tuesday evening. The question of a municipal light plant occupied the greater part of the evening. The Light Committee made their demonstration of putting the cart before the horse and then submitted the proof that the cart was in that position. In other words they submitted estimates of the cost of erecting a municipal plant and of operating the same after erected, but did not mention the outlay of the committee in securing these estimates. The cart being ready for moving, there was a confession that the cart was before the horse for at the conclusion of the report. Councilman Keith was directed to present the proposed plan to the Public Service Commission for approval and Borough Attorney Swope was asked to submit opinion as to the amount the debt of the town can be increased without submitting to a vote of the people. If either or both these horses will not push the cart, then the planning of cart or municipal plant, with all outlay in the planning has not helped the situation, but only added complications. If one or both of these horses balk, it is useless to discuss or have discussed the advisability of a municipal plant. After it has been determined that a municipal plant is a legal possibility, will come the time for consideration of its advisability.

"At a previous meeting of the council we gave figures which we ourselves had compiled, relative to the establishment of a municipal light plant for Gettysburg. After careful consideration and investigation we had that those figures are similar to figures compiled by experts.

"We made a trip to Harrisburg, with the Borough Attorney, and consulted the manager of the Bell Telephone Company. The poles of the said company can be secured for use by the borough. We have also negotiated with the Cumberland Valley Independent Telephone Company for the use of the poles of that company and we have no doubt of obtaining permission to use them also.

"We herewith give the figures of the cost of erecting a municipal light plant and the names of parties who are willing to furnish the required material and erect the proposed plant.

To erect power house—$240—Leri Diehl.

300 poles at $1.50 each—$450—Chas. Rudisill.

Wire, cross arms, hardware, brackets, pins, insulators—$1635—Wilson Maltman Electric Company, Baltimore.

Generator—$251—Fairbanks, Morse and Company.

Oil Engine—$1265—Fairbanks, Morse and Company.

Belting, $15; switchboard, $75; regulator and panel, $550; Lighting apparatus, $10; for 151 brackets, shades and sockets, $750—Wilson-Maltman Electric Company, Baltimore.

Labor for stringing 15 and one-half miles of wire—$300—Geo. Thomas.

Setting 300 poles at $1.50 each pole—$450—George Thomas.

Hanging lamps and brackets—$90.70—George Thomas.

50 guy wires—$50—George Thomas.

Wiring power house and setting machines—$35.

Drayage and incidentals—$100.

"The total cost, according to these estimates which are founded on bids of the various parties mentioned, of erecting the plant will be $6211.70.

"The cost of operating the plant a year will be $1200, according to estimates and bids we give herewith.

Engineer—$45 or $50 a month, which includes wire and poles—George Hughes and George Berger.

Oil for fuel—$350 to $450, depending on the listed price.

Engine oil and waste—$150.

Total cost of operation for one year—$1200.

"The present cost of lighting the town is approximately $3,000 a year. Let Council put aside that sum for the next four years and erect its own plant. Add the cost of operation of the municipal plant for four years, $4800, and there is a sum total of $11,011.70 for cost of plant and light for four years. Subtract that sum from $12,000, which the borough would pay the electric light company in four years and there is a balance of $988.30, with the plant clear. And after the fourth year there will be an annual saving to the borough counting all things equal of $1800 a year with the plant as an asset."

The contract with the Gettysburg Light Company expires on August 9, and a motion prevailed that Council offer to continue the light arrangement with them on the present basis to be terminated on 9th day's notice.

Borough Attorney Swope submitted opinion that back business paid in 1912 could not be legally refunded.

The Sewer Committee was directed to write the Gettysburg National Park Commission for permission to build a sewer for O'Neal connection over U. S. land.

A complaint as to the condition of Dr. O'Neal's pavement on Baltimore Street, the secretary was directed to send the owner notice to build.

Bill presented by Burgess Raymond for extra police, some of the service being at ball games, was continued until next meeting for explanation by Burgess.

The Secretary was instructed to collect property owner's share of new curbs that are being laid.

Councilman Baughman protested against condition of square and some of the streets and suggested that they should be cleaned at least once a week.

Borough Attorney Swope reported that the opening of Fourth and Water streets until they would intersect in northeastern part of the town would take lands of Lee Tipton, Charles Haar, Martin Winter, Gettysburg Furniture Company, Charles Kappes and Lewis Barbehenn. In his opinion the benefits to Charles Kappes would equal the damages. That the Gettysburg Furniture Company, Messrs. Winter and Haar would give the right of way. That Lee Tipton asked $300 for land taken which was fair. That Mr. Barbehenn in view of a small 35 foot frontage at run on Stratton street cut off from balance of land asked $10 a front foot or $500 for his land, which in Mr. Swope's opinion was double the actual damages and condemnation was advised. No action was taken.

Successful Lutheran Assembly.

The eighth Annual Lutheran Summer Assembly, the third at Gettysburg, and the first to be conducted on the Seminary Campus here, was an unqualified success from the opening sunset service last Thursday evening to the closing recitation on Wednesday evening. The registered attendance from the outside was large, starting with three times the number at the first session last year. The total number was well advanced into the second hundred. Many rooms in the Seminary building were occupied. The buildings had been prepared for such occupancy during the peace celebration are not fitted to take care of an assembly most conveniently. A large number of the guests took their meals at the refectory. The expressions of commendation and pleasure with all the plans and preparations are convincing that the Lutheran Summer Assembly has found its ideal location, one that contributes in every way to the purpose of the assembly. The studies, themes, addresses, lectures and services are in their own natural setting, at the oldest Lutheran Theological institution and the beauty and charm of the surroundings make it a most delightful point at which to spend a vacation, and at the same time to study and to be inspired. The large majority attending were former students, delighted to return here and many bringing with them their wives and families. The management is to be congratulated upon the success of the assembly this year and that they have it an ideal permanent location. The officers of the assembly are President, Rev. S. Winfield Herman of Harrisburg; Vice Presidents, Dr. J. A. Singmaster and Dr. W. A. Granville; Secretary, Rev. Geo. N. Laufer of Newville; Treasurer, Rev. John W. Meyer of Jersey City.

The program as prepared and recently published, was carried out in every detail. The feast of good things was added to. An address by Dr. J. D. Curran of Feiton, Pa., a returned missionary from Africa, was one of the unannounced features and was greatly appreciated.

The lecture room each evening was filled to its capacity to hear the most interesting illustrated lectures, one on "The Holy Land" by Rev. H. W. A. Hanson of Harrisburg, on "Japan" by Mrs. E. C. Cronk of Columbia, S. C., on "Yellowstone Park" by Dr. Luther DeVoe of Germantown, and on "The History of Gettysburg College" by Dr. W. A. Granville. Each day sessions were from 9 to 12 o'clock in morning and 2 to 4 o'clock in afternoon, with a sunset service at 7 p. m., held on campus whenever possible and evening session and address at 8 o'clock.

The assembly closed with a delightful reception by Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Singmaster at their home on Wednesday evening.

DEATH RIDES IN COLLISION

DANIEL LUCKENBILL ON BICYCLE COLLIDES WITH AUTO.

Bicycle on Wrong Side of Road and Autoist Exonerated by Coroner's Jury.

Daniel Luckenbill, aged about 42 years, while returning on a bicycle to his home in Abbottstown, last Thursday evening was struck by an automobile driven by Harry A. Spaulding, of Littlestown. The accident occurred about two miles West of Abbottstown on the Hanover and Berlin turnpike. Luckenbill was on the wrong side of the road and neither he nor the occupants of the car saw each other in time to avoid the collision. Luckenbill was hurled about twelve feet sustaining lacerations of the scalp and face and a broken collar bone. Dr. P. C. Miller, of Abbottstown, was immediately summoned and at once hurried Luckenbill to the York hospital in his automobile. After an examination it was found that Mr. Luckenbill was in a serious condition. Mr. Luckenbill rallied several times during the night but at an early hour Friday morning a decided change took place and death followed about four o'clock.

The deceased, who was a widower, lived with his mother, Mrs. Mary Wetzel, in Abbottstown. He is survived by one son, Paul, and the following brothers and sisters: George and Levi Luckenbill, of York; Plus, of Carlisle; Harry, of New Oxford; Chas. and Jacob, of Hanover; Lewis, of Parkville; Mrs. Henry Raubensine, both of Hanover.

Henry A. Spaulding, Littlestown, was exonerated of any responsibility for the death of Daniel Luckenbill, of Abbottstown, at the inquest, held by Alderman C. F. Keech, acting coroner. Eight witnesses, who testified at the inquest at the York hospital, agreed that the Abbottstown man was on the wrong side of the road when the accident occurred.

According to the testimony, the accident occurred about two miles from Abbottstown, near the farm of Harry C. Brinton. Hills slope from both sides toward a culvert, the place forming a favorite spot for motorists and bicycle riders to "shoot" down one hill obtaining a momentum for ascending the other.

Approaching from Abbottstown, from which direction Spaulding was coming, there is a curve in the road. At that place just before Luckenbill was struck he claims to have blown his horn. The party in Spaulding's auto saw Luckenbill only when within 10 feet away from where the collision occurred.

Luckenbill was on the left side of the road, they said, riding with his head down. Spaulding thought that he was going to get by and he turned slightly to the left to give him room, according to the eye witness, George Lochbaum, Luckenbill, after clearing the front part of the machine was thrown against the rear. He had tried to turn to the right, but owing to the loose stones in the road did not succeed and then apparently kept to the left and striking the bank or a stone in the road, was thrown against the machine. He was thrown about 10 feet his bicycle with him.

Lochman testified that Spaulding was on the right side of the road when the actual collision occurred. He stopped and with Mrs. Spaulding and the members of his family, helped Luckenbill to the porch of Mr. Britton. Here Dr. T. C. Miller, Abbottstown, and Dr. Keagy, Hanover, attended him. It was discovered then that the deceased had sustained two fractures of the skull on the right side of the head.

SAMUEL HENRY BUEHLER died suddenly at his home on Stevens street, nearly Wednesday morning from heart disease, aged 67 years, 1 month and 11 days. He had been on town on Tuesday in his usual health. About two o'clock Wednesday morning he complained to his wife of not feeling well. Dressing he went down stairs and sat down on the front porch. Mrs. Buehler meanwhile had summoned a physician. After sitting on the porch for a few minutes Mr. Buehler got up and started to go into the house for a drink of water. He fell to the floor after taking a step or two and expired almost instantly.

Samuel Henry Buehler, known to everyone as "Hen" Buehler, was a son of the late George E. and Julia A. Buehler, being born in this place June 24, 1847. He learned the tinning trade in his father's establishment and followed the business for many years, occupying for a long time a shop used as tinners' shop in the building of his uncle opposite the Western Maryland depot. He was a veteran of the Civil War, as far as known the youngest in the town. He served for nine months in the 29th Regiment, Pennsylvania Volunteers, and participated in the engagement at Fort Steadman and Siege of Petersburg. He was an ardent G. A. R. man and a member from its formation of Corporal Skelly Post No. 2.

"Hen" Buehler was a big hearted fellow, always ready to do a neighbor or friend a favor or lend a helping hand. The funeral was held Friday afternoon with interment in the Evergreen Cemetery. He leaves a wife, who was Miss Louisa Allison, and one brother, A. Danner Buehler, the last surviving member of his immediate family.

George A. Shaeffer of North Washington street, died on Tuesday afternoon on a Western Maryland train en route to Baltimore. He was 71 years old. He had taken the train to go on a visit to his son William. At Hampstead the passengers were required to walk around a wreck in order to be transported by another train. He had been in apparent good health until he reached the second train when he was suddenly taken ill and expired before train reached Glyndon. The body was taken to Gettysburg on Friday, when the funeral was held and interment was made in Evergreen Cemetery. Mr. Shaeffer followed the carpenter trade for many years and was a battlefield guide in late years. His wife died last October. He leaves two daughters and three sons, Mrs. A. Hornbuckle of St. Louis, Mo., Mrs. Charles Assenheimer of Philadelphia, George W. Bruce, and William Shaeffer. Mr. Shaeffer was a native of the Cumberland Valley and had a number of relatives in and near Carlisle.

Rev. Jesse Bowman Young, D.D., died in Chicago on last Thursday at the age of 70 years. Dr. Young and his daughter were visitors here during the peace celebration of last year. Dr. Young was a former pastor of the Methodist Church in this place and has many warm and devoted friends here. He graduated from Dickinson College and served during the Civil War as assistant provost marshal, Second Division Third Army Corps. Entering the Methodist ministry after the war he served charges in this State at Altoona, Harrisburg, Gettysburg and other places. It was while pastor here that he inaugurated the movement for the building of the present Methodist church, and as the first lecturer on the great battle and battlefield helped to raise the funds for the erection of the church. Leaving this State he went to Kansas City and was editor for eight years of the "Central Christian Advocate" of St. Louis. Later he removed to Chicago where for a number of years he has lived, serving as minister, lecturer, writing for the religious press and similar work. His first book was entitled "What a Boy Saw in the Army" and his last book was published by Harper's last year, "The Battle of Gettysburg: A Comprehensive Narrative," and was highly commended for its accuracy and clearness with which the subject was treated.

PAUL W. ALLISON, son of Herbert P. Allison of Stevens street, died in Omaha, Nebraska, on Sunday, aged about 31 years. The telegram announcing his death gave no details, and as Paul had been working for large shipping concerns and no word of previous illness had been received, it is supposed death was due to an accident. He leaves a wife and two sons, James and Herbert.

NEW DIRECTORY OF ADAMS COUNTY

Our representatives wear this badge.

The publishers of the old reliable FARM JOURNAL of Philadelphia, are preparing to publish the illustrated DIRECTORY OF ADAMS COUNTY, giving the name, post-office, rural route, and telephone connection of every farmer, business man, and householder in the county, all arranged alphabetically, and a classified BUSINESS DIRECTORY, including all business houses in the county, arranged under the proper headings.

With the Directory is given a complete ROAD MAP of the county, with every road NUMBERED to show the exact location of each farm, as given in the Directory.

This Directory will contain many interesting PICTURES of well-known farmers and business men of the county, fine farms, thoroughbred stock, churches and public institutions, schools and pupils, etc.

The names and necessary information are being secured by PERSONAL CANVASS of all houses and business places, and of the 3752 farms in the county. This Directory and Road Map are so useful and interesting that from our experience in other counties we can guarantee that the Directory will go into at least TWO THOUSAND HOMES OF ADAMS COUNTY, where it will be constantly used by farmers and business men for the next five years.

The Farm Journal Directories are an immense improvement over directories, containing what most publications do not give. Beside all the usual information, they give the names, addresses, telephone connection, and other important information about FARMERS, secured by PERSONAL CANVASS from each farmer himself. This canvass of country districts is so costly that most directory publishers cannot afford to make it, and ordinary lists of farmers published are in nearly all cases merely copied from official lists.

The classified BUSINESS DIRECTORY includes every business house in the county, whether in city or country. In other directories the names of houses in cities and large towns only are given.

These features with the ROAD Map, makes the Farm Journal Directory an indispensable hand-book for every live farmer and business man in the county.

If you are not sure that correct information about your farm or business has been given to one of our canvassers, please send it direct to our main office.

WHY NOT AN ALFALFA CROP

HOW MANY ACRES OF ALFALFA
ARE GROWN IN ADAMS CO.

Unless Alfalfa is Grown the Most Valuable Forage Plant is Neglected.

Are the farmers of Adams County raising Alfalfa? And if not, why not? The Compiler will be glad to give space to any answers the farmers of Adams County have to the above questions. An editorial in a recent issue of the Philadelphia North American told the following remarkable story of Alfalfa, and after reading it is difficult to understand why every farmer does not have a field of Alfalfa growing into money faster than any other known forage plant.

A day's journey through the farm-lands of Pennsylvania, or any other state east of the Mississippi, is not apt to be marked by the sight of many fields clothed in the purple and green of alfalfa.

For some reason, farmers in the eastern part of the United States never planted much of this marvelous hay stuff. The latest general census showed 4,500,000 acres of alfalfa west of the Father of Waters and only 133,000 acres on this side.

This same census shows that the average yield per acre of alfalfa—both on irrigated and unirrigated land—far exceeds that of any other hay or forage crop, in some instances by more than 100 per cent and in none by less than 50 per cent.

So, with hay becoming more and more costly and thus adding to the cost of living, it seems strange that farmers generally should not pay more attention to this remarkable plant, which not only produces from three to eleven crops a year, but while so doing actually enriches the soil upon which it subsists by replenishing the rapidly decreasing supply of nitrogen, one of the essential plant-food elements.

In a recent address before the National Hay Association, W. J. Spillman, agronomist of the Federal department of agriculture, had this to say concerning alfalfa, which he called "the oldest plant known to man and the most valuable forage plant ever discovered."

It has not been appreciated in the eastern part of the United States until the last five years. We are now growing it successfully in every state in the Union, and I believe it is safe to say in every agricultural county in the United States it is being grown with success.

Two weeks ago I secured a picture of a field of alfalfa in South Carolina that was sowed over sixty-nine years ago. It was still in pretty good condition. I know of another field in New York state sowed forty-five years ago, and one in Minnesota that was sowed thirty-three years ago. All over the west there are thousands of fields of alfalfa that were sowed twenty-five years ago that are still yielding large crops. In Wisconsin alfalfa yields three crops of hay a year, and in Texas, four and five large crops. In southern California, below sea level where they never have any frost, they cut alfalfa eleven times a year, and in Texas they cut it nine times a year.

Alfalfa does not exhaust the soil. Nitrogen is the soil's most important element and the one most liable to give out; the one the farmer is called upon to supply first.

Alfalfa does not ask the farmer for nitrogen at all, because it can get its nitrogen out of the atmosphere. Four-fifths of the atmosphere consists of nitrogen. Ordinarily, plants cannot make use of that nitrogen at all; the roots of the alfalfa will leave in the soil eight or ten times as much nitrogen as was there before. The farmer who plants alfalfa, clover or peas does not have to get nitrogen from the fertilizer factories.

This arch-conservator among plants was carried into Greece by the Persians under Xerxes 500 years before Christ, and 1200 years later the Moors brought it over from Africa into Spain, whence it spread to France, Belgium and later to England.

Cortez brought it to Mexico in 1519, and during the same century it was introduced to the Atlantic coast of our present nation. But the Indians were not agricultural and the early European settlers did not adopt alfalfa as a crop.

Meantime, just after the discovery of gold in California, alfalfa first was grown along the Pacific coast, and from that beginning it has spread through the far west, where to-day it ranks as the most dependable of all crops and the one most rapidly increasing in acreage.

Last year in Kansas, the banner alfalfa state, the seed gathered after three cuttings of hay had a total value of more than $8,000,000. And last year was the drought year out there.

It is alfalfa's fine disdain of rainfall that constitutes it such a certain asset. Its wonderful root-habits account for this. While the plant itself commonly grows no higher than three or four feet, its roots go down ten or twenty feet, or even deeper. In the one case reported by the chief of the department of agriculture's irrigation inquiry, the roots were found penetrating through crevices in the roof of a tunnel 125 feet below the surface of an alfalfa field.

In his authoritative "Book of Alfalfa," F. D. Coburn says:

"Prof. W. P. Headen, of Colorado, found roots nine feet long from alfalfa only nine months old, and another reports roots seventeen inches long of but four weeks' growth, the plants being but six inches high. It usually has a slender taproot, with many branches tending downward, yet with considerable lateral growth. As the taproot is piercing the earth it is also sending out new fibrous roots, while the upper ones, decaying, are leaving humus and providing innumerable openings for air, the rains and fertilizing elements from the surface of the soil. The mechanical effect of this root-growth and decay in the soil constitutes one of the greatest virtues of the plant, and by its roots alfalfa becomes, self-acting, by far the most efficient, deep-reaching subsoiler and renovator known to agriculture."

HAPPY MOTHERHOOD

The happiness of motherhood is too often checked because the mother's strength is not equal to her cares, while her unselfish devotion neglects her own health.

It is a duty of husband or friend to see that she gets the pure medicinal nourishment in Scott's Emulsion, which is not a drug or stimulant but nature's concentrated oil-food tonic to enrich and even the blood, strengthen the nervous and aid the appetite. Physicians everywhere prescribe Scott's Emulsion for overworked, nervous, tired women; it builds up and holds up their strength.

Get Scott's at your nearest drug store.

One might think that a plant which gives so much to its parent earth would have less feed value than other varieties of forage. Exactly the reverse is true, however.

As a standard of comparison, we may take red clover, which generally is regarded as the richest and best yielding forage.

The Massachusetts experiment station, after a series of tests, reports that 100 pounds of clover contain 47.49 pounds of digestible food and 6.95 pounds of proteins, while 100 pounds of alfalfa contain 54.43 pounds of digestible food and 11.22 pounds of proteins.

The New Jersey station reports that the average yield per annum of green clover to the acre is 14,000 pounds, and of green alfalfa, 26,500 pounds; the protein in the clover is 316 pounds and in the alfalfa, 2214 pounds; one ton of alfalfa has 265 pounds of protein, and clover only 246 pounds. But alfalfa will produce three, four or more cuttings each year, while clover will produce but one or at most two. Further, clover will ordinarily survive but two years, while alfalfa will last from ten to a hundred.

The Wisconsin experiment station says that "one acre of alfalfa yields as much protein as three acres of clover, as much as nine acres of timothy and twelve times as much as an acre of bromine grass."

As to its nutritive and economic value, we need go no further than quote Prof. Henry G. Holden, of Iowa, everywhere recognized as one of the foremost experts in the world. He says:

"There is no other combination of feeds so economical for the production of beef, pork, butter and eggs, and for growing animals as corn and alfalfa. Neither will give the best results alone. We need alfalfa because it balances up the corn ration and saves the large waste of starch which always takes place where corn is fed alone."

"We need alfalfa because we can in this way grow on our own farms the protein more profitably than we can buy it in feed stuffs. We need alfalfa because it feeds the soil and enables us to grow larger crops of corn and oats. We need alfalfa because it produces on an average double the feed value per acre of clover or any other forage crop."

In 1909, the latest year for which alfalfa figures are obtainable, there were 5000 acres of alfalfa in Pennsylvania, which produced at the rate of two tons per acre, or nearly twice as largely as any other forage crop. In addition to this high percentage of production, every acre thus planted was being enriched without cost to the grower.

Since that time the acreage has increased, but slowly, and in small volume. As a rule, farmers in this part of the country seem disinclined to plant much of it, because some extra care is required in the preparation of the soil and such matters as drainage, time of seeding and primary cultivation. Yet the Department of Agriculture in Washington, or any state agricultural college, is more than willing to furnish all needed information regarding its care, and it has been demonstrated in our own state that no other forage crop returns so large a measure of profits and benefits when this care is bestowed.

We think it would be well to start in Pennsylvania a movement similar to that organized in Wisconsin three years ago, and known as the "Alfalfa Order." This is an organization of farmers whose primary object is thus banding together to create enthusiasm over alfalfa and to demonstrate its remarkable virtues.

Although city folk seldom stop to think of such a thing, Pennsylvania is one of the leading agricultural states in the Union. In 1909 the total value of its crops was $167,000,000, and it ranked thirteenth among crop-producing states.

Growing of alfalfa on a much larger scale would greatly increase the productive value of many acres of land which, under the rapidly advancing land values of the last few years, are not much more than paying interest at present. In addition, it would replenish large areas of once-fertile soil which have been devitalized by constant cultivation and lack of proper care.

Everywhere the need for making each available acre produce larger returns is confronting the banker and the business man as well as the farmer. It is an economic need which must be met, and in a considerable measure it can be adequately answered by alfalfa, which one experienced agronomist has called the "physical savior of the land."

Auto Recommendations.

 2. Go slow: 1. Passing children; 2. Passing vehicles; 3. Approaching crossings; 4. Turning corners.
 3. Stop: 1. At railroad crossings; 2. Behind standing street cars.
 4. Use chains on slippery pavements.
 5. When in doubt—go slow or stop.

Correcting a Mistake

ROADS ARE NOT PERMANENT All Types of Roads Must Be Constantly Maintained

There is no phase of the road problem more important than that of maintenance. The general impression that there are certain types of roads that are permanent is erroneous. No permanent road has ever been constructed or ever will be, according to the road specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. The only things about a road that may be considered permanent are the grading, culverts, and bridges. Roads constructed by the most skillful highway engineers will soon be destroyed by the traffic, frost, rain, and wind, unless they are properly maintained. But the life of these roads may be prolonged by systematic maintenance. A poor road will not only be improved by proper maintenance but may become better in time than a good road without it.

The first and last commandment in earth road maintenance is to keep the surface well drained. To insure good drainage the ditches should be kept open, all obstructions removed and a smooth crown maintained. Except for very stony soil the road machine or scraper may be used very effectively for this work. The machine should be used once or twice a year and the work should be done when the soil is damp so that it will pack and bake into a hard crust. Wide and shallow side ditches should be maintained with sufficient fall and capacity to dispose of surface water. These ditches can in most places be constructed and repaired with a road machine.

All vegetable matter such as sods and weeds should be kept out of the road as they make a spongy surface which retains moisture. Clods are also objectionable for they soon turn to dust or mud and for that reason roads should never be worked when dry or hard. Boulders or loose stones are equally objectionable if a smooth surface is to be secured.

A split-log drag or some similar device is very useful in maintaining the surface after suitable ditches and cross section have once been secured. This drag can also be used to advantage on a gravel road as well as on earth road. The principle involved in dragging is that clays and most heavy soils will puddle when wet and set very hard when dry. The little attention that the earth road needs must be given promptly and at the proper time if the best results are to be obtained.

In dragging roads only a small amount of earth is moved, just enough to fill the ruts and depressions with a thin layer of plastic clay or earth next rain instead of finding ruts, depressions and clods in which to collect ruts off leaving the surface but little affected. The drag is drawn over the road at an angle of about 45 degrees. The driver should ride on the drag and should not drive faster than a walk. One round trip, each trip surrounding a wheel track, is usually sufficient to fill the ruts and smooth the surface. If necessary the road should be dragged after every bad spell of weather, when the soil is in proper condition to puddle well and still not adhere to the drag. If the road is very bad it may be dragged when very wet and again when it begins to dry out. A few trips over the road will give the operator an idea as to the best time to drag. Drag at all seasons but do not drag a dry road.

The slope or crown of an earth road should be about one inch to the foot reduced by dragging toward the ditch instead of from it. If drag cuts too much, shorten the hitch and change our position on the drag. If it is necessary to protect the face of the drag with a strip of iron, it should be used with the edge of the drag and not projecting. A cutting edge should be provided as the main object in dragging is to smear the damp soil into position.

DUST.
The hot, dry winds of August eddying through the city streets and along the country roads will carry everywhere clouds of dust. It is the pet abomination of housewives and their instinctive dislike is well founded. For in the city streets each tiny particle that is blown about may be a raft which bears the minute disease-reducing organisms which we call germs.

The means by which many of our contagious diseases are transmitted have been discovered to be through personal contact or through insects which carry the disease germs from the sick to the well. While the ancient theory that plagues were transmitted by the air has been disproved by the investigations of modern science, a dust laden atmosphere may be responsible for spreading certain infections.

Experiments have shown that some of the germs of communicable disease die under brief exposure to the sun's rays. Others are less susceptible and thrive for a certain length of time amid the tiny particles of dust. The germs of tetanus or lockjaw are found in roads and about stables, and if the tiny particles of dust carrying these germs are introduced into a wound, tetanus is apt to result.

In the sputum of a sufferer from tuberculosis, in the dust of the streets or sidewalks we often find the tubercle bacillus, the germ responsible for consumption.

We have reason to believe that the germs of smallpox and possibly pneumonia may also be transmitted in this way.

Dry sweeping of the street with its accompanying clouds of more or less infected dust, and the dry sweepings of buildings may be a possible source of disease infection.

In many of the European and in some American cities the streets are washed every day. This is a sanitary measure of no little importance and should be followed wherever possible. Dry sweeping and dusting with the old fashioned dusters should be abolished.

Distillers Business Methods.

The following letter from a distillery company to a Keely Institute makes interesting reading. It was printed recently in the "Outlook," Kentucky Distiller's Distributing Company, Distributors direct from the Distillery.
Kansas City, Mo., Dec. 3, 1913.
Keely Institute,
Dwight, Illinois.

Gentlemen—Our customers are your prospective patients. We can put on your desk a mailing list of over 50,000 individual consumers of liquor. This list is the result of thousands of dollars of advertising.

Each individual on the list is a regular user of liquor. The list of names is now live and active. We know because we have circularized it regularly. We will furnish this list in quantities at the prices listed below. Remittance to accompany order.

10,000 to 50,000 $400.00
20,000 300.00
10,000 200.00

We will not furnish the list in less than lots of 10,000.
Discontinuance of business January 1, is the occasion of selling our mailing list.

Yours truly,
Kentucky Distiller's
Distributing Company.

W. Franklin, Jr.
The same letter was sent to the Neal Institute of Chicago, another institution for alcoholism, the management of which followed up and was informed that a charge of ten cents per name would be made for the exclusive use of the list. The last letter, a "follow-up," dated December 20, to the Neal Institute contains the following paragraph, as printed in the Chicago "Tribune," Friday, April 17. The "Tribune" is authority for the statement that the original letters of the Distillery Company are in the possession of the Neal Institute.

We know that you can make our list exceptionally productive to you. Each man on it has been a regular buyer of liquor by mail and a constant user of it, and there is not a single one who would not like to quit the habit. Each man is keenly alive to the inquiry of his practice, and he is only awaiting some way of stopping. If you can convince him of the permanent efficacy of your treatment he is your patient, and you know how to convince him.

Friends' General Conference 1914.

Arrangements are about perfected for the Friends' General Conference of 1914, which will open in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., September 2nd. This attractive convention town is reached by rail from Albany. A popular way of getting there will be by steamboat from New York to Albany. The boat will leave New York at 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the 1st and will reach Albany in the night.

The trip will be on the steamboat Adirondack, and will be made so as to traverse the lower Hudson by daylight. A special train or trains, will take the Conference crowd from Albany to Saratoga the morning of the 2nd. An illustrated pamphlet about the Conference may be had for the asking. Address Henry W. Wilbur, 140 North Fifteenth street, Philadelphia.

WHO IS THIS MAN VANCE M'CORMICK?

By J. Horace McFarland, President
American Civic Association.

PART I.

This question has been asked me frequently. In most similar cases the person at interest would answer himself, but it is a part of Mr. McCormick's singular modesty, amounting at times to almost shyness, that he seems himself to be uninterested as to who he is.

Vance McCormick is a young man, as men in public life go. He has passed all his life in Harrisburg, except for the college years at Yale, during which I presume he studied creditably, but during which I know he acquired fame for himself and for Yale on the football field. I mention this because it has a most interesting and important relation to the things he did after he left the gridiron.

He is part of an old, influential and wealthy family, ramifications of which touch Chicago. I never did understand Mr. McCormick very well until I came to know his mother. Then I came into some comprehension as to how a young man of wealth and social opportunity could be so little interested in the flutterings of fashion and so earnestly and vigorously a part of the life of his town that has to do with making it a better place in which to live.

A little more than a dozen years ago Harrisburg began to feel the stirrings of a city decency that had previously been a stranger in it, or, indeed in any other Pennsylvania town. There came a movement to do things for Harrisburg. We were drinking—that is, those of us who could afford to buy filters were drinking—water of such filthiness that an accurate description of it would be unprintable under the postal laws. The sewers of the town fitted the water that went into them; the river front fitted the sewers.

The parks in those days were trifling in extent and useless in management. In fact, their extent was relatively inconsiderable, being only a trifle more than 40 acres, and their management was practically non-existent.

There were but two paved streets in the town, and the paving was very carefully preserved from use or damage by traffic under a coating of filth, mud and manure, removed several times a year to assure that the asphalt was still there.

Mr. McCormick was one of the first to take interest in the movement to secure expert advice as to what was best to do in this unpleasant situation. He contributed money, but he did a great deal more than that. He contributed time and personality. The reports of the experts, obtained in due time, meant that the town had to be politically regenerated, in order that anything should be done for the people who really paid the bills of mismanagement and inefficiency. Public order in Harrisburg at that time was in the same class as to possible description as the water and the sewers I have above alluded to.

Mr. McCormick participated in the plans for educating the people of the town to the necessity not only of voting money to buy filtration, sewers, parks, playgrounds and paving, but to use intelligence, knowledge and interest in the conduct of the city.

To make sure that things should go right, he consented, with great reluctance, as I happen to know, to be the candidate for mayor. In order not to embarrass the success of the municipal loan campaign, he withdrew from the executive committee handling the campaign, but there was not a man woman or child in Harrisburg that did not know that his success, and the success of the loan campaign, and the introduction of public decency and public efficiency were all in one movement.

Mr. McCormick was elected. The improvement campaign was won. The majorities for both were about the same, as they were also for the practically non-partisan officials who took office with Mr. McCormick. Men had been elected regardless of party labels.

Mr. McCormick took up with courage the nasty job of cleaning up the morals of the dirty city. He established the innovation of inviting people to come to the mayor's office and talk over with him the best men for places at his command. There were no gum-shoe interviews, and most of the men he appointed were too good for the job, as ordinarily construed, and had to be coaxed to take them in order to serve the city.

PART II.

Following Mr. McCormick's inauguration as Mayor of Harrisburg, things began to happen right away, and they happened right along. There was a man in the mayor's office who knew all about sticking to a thing when he believed it to be right. He was courteous to everybody, for he is naturally a good mixer, but positive in his views. The man who was in honest opposition to him found a reason. The man who was trying to put something over found trouble.

The city jumped in every respect. By reason of the movement in which Mr. McCormick had so large a part, there was going on at one time, instead of piecemeal, the building of the filtration plant, the working out of a park system, the paving of the streets, and a revision of the sewers. Mr. McCormick held these various things in inter-relation with each other. He stepped across currents and interferences. Always he kept his ear open for facts, and his hand ready for action. He was not then, and never has been since, to my knowledge, much of a "next week" man. Today is his time, and he has always had time to do something today, if it needed to be done, and it was ready to be done.

Mr. McCormick had had experience in city councils before he became mayor. He knew the members of the councils, and most of them respected him. The rest feared him, because of his determination, his smile and his horribly heavy hand. He got along mightily well with councils, however, because he never asked them to do anything that was not right, and the councilmen all wanted to do right, anyway!

During his term there came a time when it was practicable to make a new bargain with the local trolley company. Mr. McCormick met it on fair lines, fighting it out single-handed and alone, because in this councils were not at first with him. He won, and later the trolley company came to see that they won also, because they got a fair bargain and had a definite and proper relation to the city, the use of whose streets was the chief item of their good will.

Public order became a fact instead of a dream during Mr. McCormick's term. The city was cleaned up. It is a curious part of Mr. McCormick's personality that those who come in contact with his heavy hand seem to cherish no resentment against him. I rode with him once in a carriage during a public convention, when the streets were lined with people. Mr. McCormick pointed out various men with whom he had had that kind of contact which occurs in the police court. "There's Tom Smith," he said, pointing to a burly negro. "I had to send him up for sixty days." Smith was shouting "Hurrah for the mayor!" at the top of his voice. Why did he do it?

After his term as mayor had expired, Mr. McCormick did not withdraw into either a shell of business or the self-sufficiency of duty done. He kept right on the job of helping Harrisburg. As president of the Municipal League he was connected with everything that went on from the standpoint of expert efficiency, and it has been the habit in Harrisburg to get expert advice in order to obtain efficiency from the very beginning of the movement of 1901. So, constantly and regularly, Harrisburg has felt the vigor, the fairness, and the fighting ability of Vance McCormick.

Just about two years ago there was an electric light readjustment in sight. Something was to be "put over," and apparently everything was smooth for the job. Mr. McCormick put the Municipal League into the game, helped to raise and contributed a large part himself of a fund with which to hire an expensive expert, looked personally into the details, insisted on a good bargain for the city, and eventually got it, so that while the new electric light company was and is well satisfied with its bargain, the city saves something like $25,000 a year. Many of the poles came down, and modern justice of electrical handling has come about.

Now I do not know that these words will help any one else to know Mr. McCormick. I hope they will help some people to know who he is by what he has done. Although I am not a Democrat, I should like tremendously to see him Governor of Pennsylvania, because I believe the application of the same sort of methods that caused things to happen in Harrisburg would almost undoubtedly cause other and even pleasanter things to happen in Pennsylvania.

The Large New W. M. Engines.

The American Locomotive Company recently delivered 20 consolidation type locomotives to the Western Maryland Railway. These locomotives are of a new type built under special designs developed by the mechanical department of the railway in co-operation with the American Locomotive Company as a part of the program to reduce operating expenses. The locomotives have a pulling power of 61,300 pounds each. This is considered the greatest possible pulling power within the axle load limitations. On a test from Cumberland to Williamsport one of the engines pulled 114 loaded cars, and many similar runs have since been made.

Letting the town stores come to the country

Without a telephone you must drive into town or, if you're too busy, put off getting what you really need 'til some other time. With a Bell Telephone you can let the town stores come right to your farmhouse and get what you want, when you want it. It has often been said that the telephone pays for itself in the greater profits it brings the farmer, but every family with Bell Telephone Service will tell you that each member tastes of its convenience and it's not only profitable, but pleasurable, to have one. You need a Bell Telephone right now. Write the Business Office for booklet.

New Auto Damaged.

The new Kline car of L. M. Allen Postmaster of Littlestown was damaged in collision with auto of Geo. A. Wagaman, a Dallastown contractor. The accident occurred on the York road. Mr. Allen was going east toward York, while Wagaman was coming out of the Seven Valleys road and was going south. There is a deep cut at the point and neither driver saw the other in time to avoid the accident. Wagaman's car struck that of Allen's in front, turning it completely around and running it onto the bank.

Both machines were damaged, but neither one upset. The jar wrenched Wagaman's back. Allen's machine, a new Kline car, had an axle broken, the left front wheel torn off, the mud guards and lamps smashed. Wagaman's auto had an axle and mud shield broken and the left front wheel was torn off.

Charles Rudisill of this place had his auto damaged in a collision last week in Chambersburg. It took place at intersection of streets. Mr. Rudisill was keeping to the right, but the car of Lincoln Shontz of Chambersburg, operated by a young girl swept into their side of street in a wide turn and struck the Rudisill car a glancing blow, damaging the car to some extent.

What The Fans Talk Of.

The Gettysburg baseball team went to Hanover last Saturday with the new pitcher Stair and overwhelmed the Hanover team by score of 3 to 2. A feature of the game came when the Captain of Hanover team took his pitcher Small out of the game on account of a wild throw. One Hanover fan explained the mitigation of the poignancy of his grief over the loss was in the fact that the largest crowd ever attended a baseball game in Hanover had witnessed the fight and the receipts as a result exceeded $250.

Pitcher Bradshaw remains with team and Pitcher Hoar has arrived. The next game with Hanover is booked for today, Saturday at Gettysburg.

The Sunday School baseball league has cancelled the few remaining games and the pennant has been awarded to the Reformed team.

The final standing was as follows:

Reformed	8	1	.888
St. James	6	4	.600
Presbyterians	5	5	.500
Catholic	2	5	.285

Unusual Exhibitions.

John W. Epley of Round Top brought to town on Monday a fine specimen of bald eagle measuring 7 feet from tip to tip of wings and weighed 3 pounds. It was seen by many people while at the Sexton & Miller barber shop. Mr. Epley found it devouring a young pig in timber on Henry Swartz farm on Sunday and securing a shot gun from Mr. Swartz, shot it.

At market Edward Hall of Buchanan Valley a stall holder, displayed three rattlesnakes he had captured on the mountains and had secured in a box. The snakes drew quite a crowd and they entertained by vigorously shaking their rattles. The largest one had ten rattles and the other two had seven and nine.

Ends Pastorate of 32 Years.

Dr. M. P. Hocker, D. D., pastor of St. Johns Lutheran Church of Steelton terminated a pastorate of thirty two years, by resigning last Sunday morning, to take effect Sept. 1. The resignation was a great surprise to the congregation and they immediately held a meeting and offered an increase of salary to Dr. Hocker to induce him to remain in his first and only charge. He was recently offered the Superintendency of the Emmaus Orphan's Home at Middletown and his resignation was to take charge of that institution. Dr. Hocker has many friends in Gettysburg, where he graduated from College and Seminary.

Change Your Seed Wheat

Sell ten bushels of your common wheat at market price, say 75 cents, making $7.50. For this sum, $7.50, we will send you enough of the wonderful Marvellous wheat to sow ten acres.

You're skeptical? We don't blame you. It will cost a stamp or postal card to get the proof how thousands of others in 1913 and 1914 saved money on their seed wheat and grew the greatest crops they ever did.

We quote just a few extracts from hundreds of letters received. The original letters are on file in our office and can be seen by interested people.

We will sow none but Marvellous.—S. H. Fulton Co., Pa. Best I ever raised; will yield twice others; 40 to 50 bushels from a grain.—D. W. Montgomery Co., Pa. Lincoln Way Route Unchanged.
President Woodrow Wilson by letter of June 17, urged upon the Lincoln Highway Association of Detroit, that the Lincoln Highway be extended from Philadelphia to Washington and thence through Frederick to Gettysburg, increasing the route between New York and San Francisco by 172 miles. One of the reasons for delaying an answer to President Wilson's request was to ascertain the attitude of counties and cities between Philadelphia and Gettysburg, says Henry B. Joy, President of the Lincoln Highway Association in his recent reply.
The answer further says that the "Work of the Lincoln Highway Association has progressed so favorably that there scarcely remains along the entire Lincoln Way any section of its route which has not been marked and to a very great extent renamed. Espe-

"The Lincoln Highway Association has committed and entrusted the Lincoln Way to all the people and especially to the states, counties, villages and cities through which its route extends. It is not possible to undo the wonderful work of the communities whose loyal patriotic efforts are making, have indeed made, the Lincoln Highway a part of the map of our country, and whose plans for its improvement are being effectively carried forward according to the financial means and energies of those communities traversed, and the aid our association is able to extend.
"The Lincoln Way is the shortest, most direct and practicable route consistent with the topography of the country from New York on the Atlantic to San Francisco on the Pacific, and to change from that basic principle and extend its length by devious windings from city to city, or from point of interest to point of interest would insure its failure as a permanent useful Memorial Way. It is not within the power of our association to alter the already painstakingly selected and actually adopted route."

Destructive Lightning.
Last Sunday evening during the electrical storm six buildings on the Joseph Holtz farm, tenanted by Geo. Young, and located about a half mile from New Chester, were destroyed by fire caused by lightning. The large bank barn was struck. The fire spread rapidly as there was no possible way of fighting the same. After the flames had partially consumed this barn, the fire spread to a stock barn fully as large as the first barn, destroyed and burned it to the ground, together with the wagon shed, hog pen and chicken house. The barns were filled to the roof with the crops of the season. Twenty-five bushels of Timothy seed was also destroyed and nearly all the farm implements. The loss is estimated at about $5,000, which is nearly all covered by insurance. Mr. Young succeeded in saving all the live stock with exception of a pig that escaped from rescuers and ran here into burning pen to lose its life.

About the same time the large bank barn owned by Wm. Dicks, midway between Hampton and New Chester, was struck by lightning and totally destroyed. The barn, which was a large one, contained all of this year's crops. The live stock was gotten out in safety with the exception of one calf. Mr. Dicks was quite a chicken fancier and his chicken house which adjoined the barn was also burned to the ground, over two hundred chickens being consumed by the flames.

The Shippensburg Normal School has requests for fifty male graduates for High School positions at from $70 to $85 a month which it cannot fill. Women graduates are also in great demand, and nearly 450 graduates of the school are teaching in New Jersey, nine and ten month terms at fine salaries. The school gives a life certificate: Free tuition to students 17 or more years of age. Write for catalogue and full particulars.

Improvements to the Great Hagerstown Inter-State Fair

Visitors of the Great Hagerstown Inter-State Fair, October 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th, 1914, will notice many changes and improvements. The unsightly and out-of-date cow sheds running from the Main Entrance to the entrance on Fairground Avenue and on down the hill from Fairground Avenue to the East have been removed and the space occupied by them will be known as Machinery Avenue. The machinery exhibit will be the finest ever seen on a fairground in the East. This great fair has been noted for its machinery exhibit and special efforts have been taken to provide more and better space and better arrangement than heretofore. Saw mill outfits, threshing outfits, gasoline engines, all kinds of pumps, farming machinery of all sorts, kinds and descriptions will be seen at this great exhibition. To take the place of the cattle stalls removed, a large and commodious cow barn 300x120 feet with concrete floors and walks has been erected. In the center of this building is a large area for judging cattle and surrounding this area is a large gallery where those interested in the judging of cattle can be seated while the contest is going on. To see from 600 to 700 head of cattle in one barn will be a novel and interesting sight. No part of the farm demands and merits more attention than the cattle. The increased price of dairy products, the demand for sanitary methods in the arrangement of dairies and the increased price of beef-cattle have all aided to make the cattle industry profitable and the management of this Great Fair have determined to give such a great industry more and better accommodations.

Gen. Miles on the War.
Lieut.-Gen. Nelson A. Miles, in an interview on the war in which all Europe is involved, said:
"It is a terrible thing to contemplate this war, for if Europe is involved it means that there will be nearly 20,000,000 men available for war. Russia alone can put 5,000,000 to 7,000,000 men in the field, and Russia would make a far different showing than she did in the war with Japan.
"Then she had to take her soldiers 5,000 miles over a single track railroad, which was in poorer condition than any one of our own six transcontinental lines. The Russian army is now in good condition and very powerful.
Germany can put 5,500,000 men in the field; Austria can show 2,500,000; France 2,000,000 and Italy 1,000,000. Just what Greece, Roumania and Bulgaria will do is problematical. You know that last summer Roumania took advantage of the situation when Serbia and Bulgaria were at war to mobilize 200,000 of her army of 400,000, throw troops right across the Danube and seize Bulgarian territory, which Roumania still holds.
"I cannot guess, either, how many men England can put into the field. Her standing force is not so very remarkable, but if she calls in territorial troops from India she can produce a vast army. I do not think so many would come from her other colonies. Neither Canada nor Australia is a thickly settled country, and the troops from there would be correspondingly few.
"I agree entirely with those who predict that this will be one of the bloodiest wars of all history, and that it may very probably be the last great war.
"The expense of keeping 20,000,000 men in the field, the fact that millions of men would be taken from industry, the cost of their equipment, which in these modern days is a very high expense, the cost of their maintenance, the cessation of commerce and transportation, make a terrible total.
"The war debts simply cannot be borne by the peoples of the Continent at this rate for long, and I hope and expect that the day will come when we shall see established a congress of nations for arbitration, to which all nations will be obliged to submit their differences."
George McLaughlin, John M. Muselman, Jacob Weikert, and Al Low, of Fairfield took a trip to Chambersburg in Mr. McLaughlin's automobile. On the way home something broke about the engine and they were compelled to walk three miles where they were met by a team which they had telephoned home for.

Clementine's Silent Partner
A Plan That Worked Well
By CLARISSA MACKIE

Miss Alvira Pitt's thin nose was poked close to the grating of the post-office window when Clementine Dilley called for her mail that February morning.
"Letter for you, Clem," shrilled Alvira as she poked the missive through the bars. "Lawyer's letter. I guess your rich uncle in Australia has died and left you $1,000,000!"
"Never had a rich uncle, and he didn't live in Australia, anyway," was Clementine's tart retort as she took her letter and went away.
As the alert little form disappeared from view the postmistress turned to her assistant.
"Another lawyer collecting letter," she explained. "Clem Dilley's business is tottering to ruin."
Josie Hicks, the little black-eyed assistant, nodded sagely.
"If village folks would only trade with Miss Dilley instead of going way over to Bayport she might make a living," she vouchsafed.
"Clem Dilley couldn't keep up a stock that would satisfy Long River folks," retorted Alvira. "Mark my words, Josie, there's going to be a change in Clem Dilley's affairs pretty soon. She's looking worried to death."
There was to be a remarkable change in Clementine Dilley's affairs if she read the lawyer's letter aright. It was a wonderful letter and one hardly to be believed, so unexpected was it. The letter read:
Dear Madam—I have a client who is anxious to invest some surplus funds in a small but lucrative business, and after investigation I am authorized to make you the following offer—viz: My client is putting $5,000 into a partnership with you to manage the dry goods business; and the partnership to be a silent one. My client believes there will be a good opening for a profitable business that has no financial backing. If you will call upon me some day this week I will go into the details of the matter with you. Very respectfully yours,
SIDON DAV.
Three days after Clementine Dilley's return from New York there was a sensation in Long River. Wagon after wagon stopped before the door of her little shop and unloaded great boxes of dry goods.
Clementine hired several girls to help her, and soon the shop was transformed from its former coyness into the well stocked appearance of a city store. Clementine had a new front put in the store and two large plate glass windows.
At last Clementine had an opening day. She brought all the flowering plants from her sunny windows, and the store looked very attractive.
From that day Clementine Dilley's business flourished mightily. Dozens of people who had always traded in Bayport, fifteen miles distant, drove up to Clementine's door and made their purchases there.
Clementine was very happy on that day when she went down to New York and presented her books for Mr. Day's inspection. The books proved that Clementine was doing a splendid business, and the lawyer said he was sure that his client would have no cause to regret his investment.
Clementine often wondered about the mysterious partner whose money enabled her to prop up a crumbling business. Why, at the end of five years she might be able to buy out her partner, and at the end of ten years she might retire from business altogether and enjoy the quiet domestic life for which she had always yearned.
But now she was glad of the business, for it kept her from being lonely. At home there was nothing save a parrot and two black cats, and at forty-five one yearns for human companionship. Clementine's friends were delighted at her good fortune, although she was not able to impart the details to any one. When he heard that Clementine Dilley was making money "hand over fist" Deacon Marberry stamped thoughtfully home to his bachelor fire-side and stared at the almanac all the evening—and never read a word.
The next day he dropped into Clementine's store and asked for collar buttons. It happened to be the noon hour, and Clementine was all alone.
"Ten cents, Mr. Marberry," said Clementine briskly as she gave him the small parcel.
The deacon fished out a wash leather bag from his pocket, untied the string that confined it, counted out the money in coppers and then replaced the bag.
"Clem," he said hurriedly, "the Scripture says 'tain't good for man to be alone.'"
"I expect that's why dogs were created—and cats—and parrots," returned Clem tartly. "Dogs and cats are good company."
"Yes—yes—yes," returned the deacon impatiently, and then warily he added, "I don't reckon you can guess who your silent partner is, Clementine, can you?"
Clementine was startled for a moment. There could be no mistaking the deacon's meaning. He wanted her to believe that he was the silent partner whose name she did not know.
But she stiffened her neck coldly.
"I might guess, Deacon Marberry," she said.
"He ain't a thousand miles away from where I be standing this minute," went on the deacon craftily.

"I don't see him," said Clementine curtly. And she was glad when a customer came in and the deacon was compelled to take his departure.
Still the deacon's mysterious tone rankled in her mind. What if it were Deacon Marberry who had been backing her business? If it were Clementine vowed that she would close the doors the very next day. But on further thought where would Deacon Marberry get $5,000 that was not needed in his grain and hay business? The answer was forthcoming—Deacon Marberry's uncle, Jehoshaphat Bean, had died six months ago, and it was rumored that the deacon had come in for the money.
It was after 6 o'clock that same evening, when Clementine was about to lock the door after the last clerk, when there came heavy footsteps on the porch and the great form of Captain Tommy Lisk loomed into view.
"Howdy, Clem?" he said cheerily as he leaned against a pile of pasteboard boxes on the counter. "I ain't seen you in a dog's age, and I reckon we used to see each other pretty often—what say?"
Clementine remembered, with some amusement, that Tommy Lisk used to call upon her once a week in the long, long ago. That was just before David Marsh had come to town. After that Clementine had not had eyes for any one save the handsome David.
"How's business?" pursued the captain genially.
"Very good," replied Clementine.
"What can I do for you, captain? It's after hours, you know, and I want to go to the lecture tonight."
"Bring it all, Clem, that's what I stopped in for!" cried Captain Lisk, slapping his huge hand on the counter. "I want to take you to the lecture tonight."
"I'm sorry, but I've arranged to go with some one else," returned Clementine, hiding her surprise at this belated attention on the part of Captain Lisk. "Thank you just the same."
"Well, better luck next time," murmured the captain. "What you say to moving pictures next Tuesday, Clementine?"
"I'll let you know later," said Clem hastily. And she breathed easier when he opened the door. At that moment he turned back again.
"I say, Clementine Dilley, I'll bet you can't guess who your silent partner is," he said jokingly.
"I might," said Clementine dryly.
"He ain't a thousand miles from where I'm standing," said the captain significantly, and, with a mysterious wink of his blue eye, he disappeared.
"The old sinners!" laughed Clementine as she put out the lights in the store. "They must have heard that I am going a good business. Imagine my marrying Hen Marberry—or Tommy Lisk!"
She grew very thoughtful as she walked home under the winter stars. Her house was at the top of the hill under a group of tall locust trees. Since she had enlarged her business she had hired a capable housekeeper, and now she felt a glow of pleasure when she saw that the windows were lighted.
There was a sad thought back of it all—a brief romance of a few months, the hurried departure of David Marsh to assume his father's responsibilities, in caring for a mother and several young children and then the gradual drifting of romance out of her life. David Marsh and romance were a dream to Clementine.
So when she opened the door and found David Marsh waiting for her in the cozy sitting room Clementine Dilley discovered in a splendid rush of joy that romance was not dead after all. David Marsh was a little changed, a little gray and worn, but still the fine, upstanding lover of her youth.
No one save Clementine heard all of his story, but we may know that after David had helped to educate his brothers and sisters he had met with great financial success and that in a roundabout way he had learned of Clementine Dilley's business troubles. So David, always true to the love of his youth, had become Clementine's unknown silent partner.
It was 7 o'clock, and the little group around the stove in Pinney's grocery still lingered, loath to go out into the cold.
Deacon Hen Marberry was winding a red muffler around his stringy neck and barking sharp retorts at Captain Tommy Lisk.
"What if I did stop in to buy some collar buttons of Clementine Dilley?" he cried angrily. "If you knew who Clem Dilley's silent partner was you'd say he had some right to buy there!"
"Clem Lisk stared incredulously.
"If you knew who Clem Dilley's partner was you'd never speak up like that to me, Hen Marberry. I'll venture to say that Clem Dilley's going to marry her silent partner, and he's standing not a thousand miles from where I be this minute!"
"Ding! ding! Tommy Lisk, 'tain't no such thing!" snarled the deacon.
"When I say he's standing not a thousand miles from where I be this minute I'm speaking the truth!" retorted the captain.
"Night you are!" said a deep voice from the doorway, where a tall, dark man was observing the scene with visible amusement. "Miss Dilley's partner is standing right here, Captain Lisk, and when you say she's going to marry her partner you're right again. I ought to know, because I'm David Marsh, and I'm the man!"
Five minutes later the deacon and the captain went out into the bitter night, and their burts were not salved by the muffled laughter that followed their departure.
"Wimmen are vipers!" muttered Deacon Marberry from the gloom that encompassed his soul.
"Some wimmen are serpents—sea serpents," amended Captain Tommy Lisk.

Teachers Elected in County.

The school directors of the county have almost finished their work in selecting teachers for the new year. There have been a number of changes from last year's teaching force. Some of the teachers are married, others have accepted positions elsewhere and a dozen or more did not apply, having arranged to go to Normal School. One of the questions that troubled the school board was the degree of relationship to a director. Miss Lydia Hartman was a first cousin to the wife of one of the directors and having received the votes of three directors the question was whether it was necessary to have a three-fourths vote. The question was submitted to Dr. N. C. Schaefer, Superintendent of Public Instruction and decision was made last week that the election of Miss Hartman was legal. The three-fourths vote affects relationship by ties of consanguinity only and a cousin to a wife of a director was not such a tie.

Big State P. O. S. of A. Convention.

York is making preparations to entertain the largest convention held in that city during the year, the Patriotic Order Sons of America, from Aug. 22 to Aug. 27. 1500 delegates are expected with 1200 members of the Reserves and on Thursday, Aug. 27, if the weather is all right, 10,000 men are expected to be in the parade.

The Patriotic Order Sons of America now has a membership of over 100,000 in this state. The membership is distributed all over the state, with 850 camps. One delegate is elected for every 100 members for fraction thereof, in each camp, which means that there are more than 1,600 delegates.

The Reserves, composed of about 1,200 men who are members of the order, in full uniform, will pitch their tents on the fair grounds. They will be under strict military discipline and will be the means of furnishing interesting entertainment for the citizens and visitors.

York and York county alone will have 4,000 members in line in this parade with at least twenty bands of music. The commandery, consisting of uniformed men of the order, will be present from Harrisburg, Altoona, Lebanon, Easton, Lancaster, Philadelphia, Williamsport, Chester and many other cities.

Helplessness.

The greatest moment in our career is when we awaken to the shilling truth that our life, to make or mar, is wholly in our hands: that neither dark destiny nor grim fate nor the stars nor the decrees of the gods nor the machinations of men or devils can cheat us of that greatness of soul and serenity of mind which are the crown of real success.

The most terrible note in the despair of the despairing is the sound of helplessness. To feel that the universe is a huge machine to grind us at last to dust, that the odds of existence are against us and that we are borne down by the tramp of irresistible forces—this is the salt taste of failure.

But when a man has discovered that he himself is master and that no outside force can touch his inner triumph that discovery is as of a new world, the America of spirit, the opening vista of limitless opportunity.—Dr. Frank Crane in Woman's World.

To Each Age Its Problems.

It is not enough that we leave our institutions as our fathers shaped them. They know little or nothing of the conditions which we face. Sufficient unto the age is the work thereof. It is not the right of any generation to project its will into the future, but it is the duty of each generation to adjust its institutions to meet its own needs.

Men need not wait until death to realize many of their ideals. They can have things here on earth which their fathers associated with the millennium. They need no longer overwork nor go cold and hungry nor suffer from pestilence or even famine. Machinery has provided the possibilities of a new life. When all of these possibilities are realized—when no one is overworked, cold or hungry, when all are leading joyous, purposeful lives—adjustment will be complete—welfare will be universal.—From "Social Sanity," by Scott Nearing.

The Girl and the Artist.

A young woman sat for a crayon portrait and was not entirely pleased with the result.

"It looks like me, of course," she said reluctantly to the artist, "and yet I think there are some things about it that ought to be changed." She suggested that the eyes should have more of an upward look, that the bracelet should be a little more prominent on her left arm and that her gown be arranged more artistically on the side.

"That would require a great deal of retouching," said the artist, "and I should have to charge you at least $15 additional."

"Oh, dear!" she exclaimed, somewhat peevish. "I shall have to give it up. Father wouldn't stand my retouching him to that extent."—Lippincott's.

Can We Pull Anything?

Sir Oliver Lodge, the eminent English scientist, said in a lecture once that there is no such thing as pulling. To speak of a horse pulling a cart was, he said, incorrect. The horse did not pull the cart. It pushed against its collar and thereby produced motion in the cart. Similarly the oarsman pushed the water, and the man drawing a handcart had to clasp the handle, and the driving force was caused by the part which clasped the handle and was therefore behind it. Even if the cart was fastened to the man's coat tail he did not pull it. He pushed against his clothes.

"No."
